

Stephanie Feger Expanded Bio

Throughout her life, Stephanie Feger has been in the business of empowering people. She's empowered her teams to collective success. She's empowered individuals, groups and organizations to embrace perspective as a tool for deeper satisfaction and personal and professional accomplishments. And she's empowered authors, small business owners and entrepreneurs with communications and marketing strategies to help them reach their goals.

Stephanie has always believed that we hold the power to our own success, and she's determined to help others uncover that power. However, it was a dream — literally — that left her with the charge to reframe how she saw her own life and encourage others to do the same. Many people wake up in the morning feeling refreshed and reinvigorated, however one day Stephanie woke up with a completely different outlook on her life altogether and it was that dream that became the catalyst for her begin anew. That dream pushed her to redefine her own success, re-evaluate her personal goals and turn her “what-ifs” into “why-nots.”

Stephanie's first book, Color Today Pretty: An Inspirational Guide to Living a Life in Perspective, shares her secrets to harnessing true perspective, the ones she has used to discover the difference between living an ordinary life and an extraordinary one. Her second book, Color Today Pretty Guided Journal, provides readers a meaningful tool to take her messages off the pages and invite them into their lives through deep and purposeful reflection. Through her speaking engagements, engaging workshops and customized learning opportunities, she continues to invite others to embrace perspective even when it may seem most challenging.

After working in the communications and marketing industry for more than 15 years, Stephanie felt called to merge her unique expertise with her life's passions. She wanted to empower people in many ways, including empower those who sought to empower others. In addition to being an author and speaker, Stephanie also is the founder and chief strategist at the emPower PR Group where she provides customized coaching and consulting to authors, small business owners and entrepreneurs, ensuring those who need to hear their empowering message can and do!

Today, Stephanie is an inspiring author, sought-after speaker and empowering marketing coach. She is a great choice for individuals who are looking to find a deeper purpose and empower their group, their teams and their organizations to achieve new levels of success.

Learn more about Stephanie and ways to collaborate with her at www.StephanieFeger.com.

Stephanie Feger Condensed Bio

Throughout her life, Stephanie Feger has been in the business of empowering people and helping others uncover the power to their own success. However, it was a dream — literally — that left her with the charge to reframe how she saw her own life and encourage others to do the same. This dream became the catalyst for her to redefine her own success, re-evaluate her personal goals and turn her “what-ifs” into “why-nots.”

Stephanie is the author of Color Today Pretty: An Inspirational Guide to Living a Life in Perspective and Color Today Pretty Guided Journal, where she shares her secrets to harnessing true perspective, the ones she has used to discover the difference between living an ordinary life and an extraordinary one. Through her speaking engagements, engaging workshops and customized learning opportunities, she invites others to embrace perspective even when it may seem most challenging.

After working in the communications and marketing industry for years, Stephanie merged her unique expertise with her life’s passions, founding the emPower PR Group where she provides customized coaching and consulting to authors, small business owners and entrepreneurs, ensuring those who need to hear their empowering message can and do!

Learn more by visiting www.StephanieFeger.com.